

Abuse in Care

Royal Commission of Inquiry

Private Sessions Facilitator

The Royal Commission of Inquiry into Abuse in Care and Faith based Institutions was established in February 2018. The Inquiry will investigate the abuse and neglect of children, young people and vulnerable adults who were in the care of State and faith-based institutions in New Zealand between 1950 and 1999 and examine ways to stop further abuse.

Te Tiriti o Waitangi is the founding document in New Zealand. This is the first Inquiry internationally that acknowledges its indigenous population through Te Tiriti o Waitangi. Māori make up over half of all children in care during the period under inquiry and the Royal Commission is committed to meaningfully applying the principles of Te Tiriti o Waitangi and recognises that there was, and still remains a disproportionate number of Māori in care and this inquiry requires a focus that is consistent with te Tiriti.

Survivor Accounts, Engagement and Communications Directorate

The Survivor Accounts, Engagement and Communications Directorate is the public face of the Commission. Survivor Accounts provides a 'front door' for survivors and manages their journey with the Commission, including ensuring their wellbeing. Stakeholder and Community Engagement establishes relationships with other stakeholders including survivor representative groups, and organisations and institutions that participate in the inquiry. Communications manages the Commission's internal and external information flows to ensure that the inquiry is well understood and supported by Commission personnel, other government departments and the public.

Survivor Accounts Business Unit

The Vision of the Commission is to transform the way we in Aotearoa care for children, young people and vulnerable adults in our community. The first and key part of the Commission’s strategy is to gather stories and evidence from survivors who have been abused in care. It is their stories that tell us what has been broken and needs to be fixed, and how best to do that based on their experiences. Survivor Accounts provides a way for the Commission to do that by being the first point of contact for survivors, enabling them to tell their stories in a safe way and providing for their wellbeing as they journey with us.

What you’ll do

Private Session Facilitators will support Commissioners to hear the experiences of survivors through confidential and private face-to-face meetings, group meetings and other forum which survivors may request, for example, via Zoom. This can include providing wellbeing support to survivors before, during and after their private session. Private Session Facilitators can support survivors with the written accounts process. Private Session Facilitators may also be involved in supporting hard to reach survivor cohorts.
